MAMMOTH DUNES

As a Scotsman, I know the stories of Golf's beginning well. Shepherds relieving boredom hitting stones with a crook around the thin, sheep grazing pasture found in a narrow strip between the sea and the farm fields, known as the Links. The game became popular, and its roots were set on firm sandy soils, where wiry fescue grass allows the ball to bounce, pitch and roll. As popularity increased, the game moved inland, golf courses on sandy soils became a rarity, and thus the ground game became all but extinct.

At the turn of the last century, one man, Mike Keiser, strove to return the game to its roots. He spent decades seeking out the most beautiful landscapes with sand as deep as one could dig, as firm as any Scottish Links and weather appealing to the wiry fescue. At Bandon Dunes he introduced a generation to Golf as it was meant to be.

At Sand Valley he has found the perfect inland site and allowed the same architects to design courses fit for this landscape. Having designed Bandon Dunes, Mike asked that I design Mammoth Dunes. These two courses share scale, width and playability. Mammoth Dunes is intended to engender confidence, reward bold, aggressive play and offer the chance of recovery. I dare you to take the tight lines, read the ground contours and work the ball to your will, have fun!
